

Pattern Correction: April #301

These corrections apply to the first printing of April pattern released in January 2019.

Instructions

1. The cutting layout should include fold and selvage.

2. Piping is needed for View B not View A in the What To Cut section. In step #2, disregard the first sentence about piping.

3. Ruffle – In steps #1 and #18, it refers to a shoulder mark on the ruffle, the shoulder mark is the center of the ruffle (the place On Fold line).

4. Buttons and Buttonholes – Step should read: With the back of the dress facing up, work buttonholes on the right-hand side of the bodice, and sew buttons on the left-hand side of the bodice using buttonhole placement on pattern as a guide.

Pattern

1. For some sizes, the back shoulder seam of the main fabric and the lining is wider than the front shoulder seam. Simply, trim off the excess at the neckline as shown in the diagram. This will not effect the overall fit or look of the garment.

How to Determine Which Pattern Version You Have

As we find printing errors, we will make corrections to the subsequent printings of covers, instructions and patterns. We began including trackable version codes with the newly branded pattern covers and patterns with the navy and aqua branding. Make sure to check the version number for the item specified as the covers, instructions and patterns are all printed separately. Patterns released prior to the navy and aqua branding like those in the top pink band or paper envelopes do not have a code to track versions.

For covers, the version code is found on the back cover at the bottom. There will be a code like “CC3S-1”. The last number, in this case 1, is the version of the cover. In this example, this is the first printing of the cover. From time to time, we may apply a sticker to the covers to fix an error between printings.

For instructions, the same version code is found in the bottom right-hand corner of each instruction page. Each sheet can be updated separately, so check each page.

For patterns, the same version code is found on each page of tissues. Each sheet can be updated separately, so check each page.
